Army Audit Agency

By COL. HARRY E. REED, GS
Chief, Army Audit Agency

BEFORE describing the mission and organization of the Army Audit Agency, it is desirable to cover briefly the history of auditing in the Army. Before and during World War II, military property accounts were audited by personnel in the employ of the Corps Area and Service Command Finance Officers. This auditing was under the technical supervision of the Chief of Finance. On the other hand, the auditing of industrial contracts was carried out by auditors in the employ of the Chiefs of the Technical Services.

Col. Reed

Shortly after the war there was a great deal of criticism directed at the Army by the Congress and by the Comptroller General of the United States because of the manner in which the Army's auditing was being carried out. In this criticism it was stated that audits should be made by completely disinterested parties. As can be seen this was not the case in the Army because contract audits were performed by the same technical service commanders who awarded the contracts, and military property audits were performed by the interested Army Commander. Thus, it was felt that auditors were not afforded a maximum freedom of action and thought.

In addition, there was no unified system of auditing. Contractors might be subjected to audit by unrelated groups of auditors which would result in variation in audit policies and their application. Also no coordinated training program for auditors existed. After much discussion and many different proposals General Order 135 was issued on 12 November 1946. This centralized all auditing in the Army Audit Agency under the Chief of Finance, but with direct responsibility to the Under Secretary of War in charge of Procurement.

The responsibilities of the Army Audit Agency were changed somewhat by General Order 85, dated 31 December 1948, when the Agency was made a functional activity of the Comptroller of the Army under the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Management. Actually, Headquarters, Army Audit Agency has a dual mission in that it also functions as the Audit Division of the Office, Comptroller of the Army, Headquarters, Army Audit Agency, or the Audit Division. has two

Pentagon Studies Proposals For Revision of JCS Duties

Top-level Pentagon consideration is being given to suggestions by Dr. Vannevar Bush, President of the Carnegie Institution, for sweeping changes in the organization of the Defense Department, particularly with reference to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Most of the proposals of Dr. Bush would require important amendments to basic laws, but some might be carried out by administrative action.

Among changes proposed by Dr. Bush are the exclusive assignment of members of the Joint Chiefs to military planning, which would mean that they would be replaced as heads of the three military services by other officers. He emphasized that their duties should be solely of a staff nature, with no command functions, either in the Joint Chiefs, or in their own services, and that the defense establishment should be completely under civilian control.

The proposals of Dr. Bush were contained in an address delivered on 26 Sept. at the dedication of the Medical Sciences Building of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. The address will undoubtedly receive consideration by the Armed Services Committees of Congress, which may request Dr. Bush to outline his suggestions in more detail when the 83d Congress convenes next January.

Dr. Bush's proposals are of particular interest to the Services, because of his long and intimate connection with military problems during and since World

Army Forced to Cut Officer Promotions

The Army made no temporary promotions this week and a preliminary evaluation of strength reports indicated that advancements during October might be less than one-half the 1040 total for September.

The promotion slow-down results apparently from the fact that larger numbers of Reserve officers than anticipated are electing to remain in active service.

The Army promotions from long-standing recommended lists are being made to the limit that vacancies and budgetary restrictions permit. Here is what appears to be in prospect for the remainder of this month.

Some promotions will be announced next week, barring a change in present plans. These advancements probably will be to the ranks of colonel and lieutenant colonel.

After these promotions, there will be an increment of promotions to major and captain, probably available for publication in the 18 Oct. issue of THE JOURNAL.

The forced slackening of the promotion pace maintained during August and September indicates that the recommended lists for promotion to captain and major will not be exhausted before the end of the year, as was previously forecast. Instead, the last persons on these lists likely will not be advanced until early in 1953.

The Army must be extremely cautious not to exceed grade ceilings, particularly in view of the Davis Amendment to the 1953 Appropriations Act. However, officials emphasize that to the limit possible, the temporary promotions will be made as quickly as possible.

The question has been raised whether the recommended lists as released at the Pentagon and published in THE JOURNAL include the names of officers nominated by commanding officers under the 5 per cent provision.

The answer is that the "5 per centers" are included in the recommended lists as published.

It has been learned that more than five times the number of officers who could be chosen under the 5 per cent provision were recommended by commanding officers. Therefore, the selection board at the Pentagon had to be extremely selective in picking officers in the 5 per cent group. Army officials concede that many outstanding officers outside of the basic zones of consideration, although recommended by commanding officers, could not be chosen at this time.

Commands Tank Bn. in Korea

Lt. Col. Roger A. Rawley has been assigned as commanding officer of the 89th Medium Tank Battalion in Korea, succeeding Col. Robert E. McCabe who was transferred to 8th Army. Colonel Rawley was previously Armor Officer for 8th Army.

Reds Active Against Sectors Held By ROK Troops; B-29's Raid Enemy Plant

HAVY ground fighting and increased air activity characterized military operations in Korea this week. Enemy infantry showed marked aggressiveness in attacking at various points along the front, particularly in sectors held by South Korean troops. The Reds gained some local successes, but there were no significant changes in the line.

Allied air attacks carried the war deep into enemy territory. During the week a spectacular night raid was made by 45 American B-29 Superforts on an enemy chemical plant at Namsan, a short distance from the Manchurian border. Heavy destruction resulted. Intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered, and enemy night fighters made a few non-firing passes at the bombers. All B-29's returned safely to their bases.

American F-86 Sabre jets continued their successful attacks on enemy MIG jets, increasing their heavy score of Red planes destroyed or damaged. Fighter-bombers and light bombers destroyed many enemy supply vehicles, cut lines of communication and rendered close support of Allied ground troops at the front line.

Navy planes and surface warships pounded enemy shore batteries, military installations, and coastal rail lines and highways along both coasts of North Korea. Enemy facilities on the west coast near Chinnampo were heavily bombarded.

POW's Cause Trouble

A serious riot in a prisoner-of-war camp resulted in the death of 57 Red prisoners and the wounding of many others. Two American soldiers were slightly injured. The disturbance occurred at a camp for 500 recalcitrant Chinese Communist prisoners on the island of Cheju off South Korea.

The uprising started when the inmates began a noisy celebration of the anniversary of the establishment of the Red regime in China. The prisoners refused to form a work party and to restore order within the compound. They were warned over the loudspeaker system that force would be used if they did not desist from their demonstration.

The prisoners continued to defy the authorities, and two platoons of guards entered the enclosure. The inmates attacked the guards with stones and with clubs, some of which were laced with barbed wire. The troops opened fire, and many of the rioters were killed and wounded. Order was then quickly restored.

An unfortunate incident was reported during the week when American planes were said to have erroneously bombed hill positions held by a Greek battalion of the United Nations Army. The Greeks had succeeded in taking a height on the western front, known as Big Nori, northwest of Yonchon, and had defended it against three enemy counter-attacks. While the fourth enemy assault was under way, some of the American aircraft, flying close support missions for the defending troops, reportedly mistook the Greeks for enemy formations and bombed the positions, inflicting a number of casualties. The enemy then gained possession of the hill.

A preliminary investigation by the Air Force indicated that the report may have been erroneous. It has been denied that any bombs were dropped by aircraft on friendly troops.

Many Battles

The fight for Big Nori was one of several separate battles that occurred during the week at scattered points along the front, when the Reds made persistent attacks to improve their positions. Most of these were repulsed, but in a few cases the enemy gained objectives after bitter fighting.

The Red attacks were strongly supported by unusually heavy mortar and artillery fire. In one 24-hour period this week the enemy fired 47,312 rounds, the heaviest volume of fire expended by the Reds in a single day during the war.

During September American planes made their best monthly record of the war in destroying enemy MIG's in air combat. They shot down 62 Red MIG's last month, and their best previous record for downed MIG's was 44, set last April. In addition to the 62 Red jets shot down during September, there were seven probably destroyed and 57 damaged.

In the same period only seven American planes were lost in air combat. Included were four F-86 Sabre jets and three F-84 Thunder jets. Five Allied planes were shot down by enemy ground fire during September, and 18 were lost to other causes.

In the ground fighting on the western front, action was particularly intense around Big Nori, northwest of Yonchon, and other heights east of Panmunjom. Repeated enemy attacks were made on high ground, which were supported by an unprecedented volume of mortar and artillery fire.

Greeks Bombed

A relatively small hill northwest of Yonchon, misnamed Big Nori, was captured by the Reds late last week. On Sunday, elements of the Greek battalion counter-attacked and temporarily re-established advance positions on the crest of the hill.

The Greeks successfully defended the hill against three strong enemy assaults, but finally yielded as enemy troops, heavily reinforced, charged the outposts.

Relatively small enemy groups probed Allied-held hill positions east of Panmunjom. These persistent attacks were all repulsed in relatively brief firefights.

On the central front, hand-to-hand fighting occurred as South Korean troops repulsed heavy enemy attacks on Capitol Hill. The Red assaults were made by shock troops of battalion strength, and were strongly supported by mortar and artillery fire, and by tanks. The enemy advanced within hand grenade range, but were driven off in fierce fighting.

ROK Troops Active

At nearby Finger Ridge the South Korean Capital Division lost and then recaptured the frequently-contested knob that it had taken from the enemy last week. In a see-saw battle, the South Koreans fought off a two-and-one-half-hour assault, and later yielded the position to another attack. A strong counter-attack was immediately launched, and the hill was recaptured after a fight that continued for two and one-half hours. The South Koreans then successfully defended the position against repeated enemy attacks.

An enemy battalion made a successful night attack on a hill east of the Pukhan River, defended by the South Korean 3d Division. Republic of Korea troops counter-attacked, but were unable to regain the lost positions.

In the same vicinity other elements of the South Korean 3d Division were attacked at five points. Four enemy platoons, supported by fire from eight tanks, attacked two advance Allied positions east of Kumsong, but were repulsed. Elsewhere on the central front there were brief and inconclusive patrol clashes.

Revision of JCS

War II. He was chairman of the National Defense Research Commission in 1940 and 1941, director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development from 1941 to 1946, Chairman of the Joint Commission on New Weapons and Equipment of the Joint Chiefs of Staff during the same period, and chairman of the Joint Research and Development Board from 1946 to 1948.

This eminent scientist said he was convinced that our organization for defense planning is not effective, and that "this country is not in a position to do military planning adequately and well." He suggested that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs be given a four-year term, instead of two years, as at present, and that the members of the Joint Chiefs give their full time to this assignment.

The speaker pointed out that the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as such, have no command responsibilities, but each as head of his particular military service does exercise command functions. His suggestion is that each member appointed to the Joint Chiefs be completely separated from his Service, and that some other individuals be named as Chiefs of Staff of the Army and the Air Force, and Chief of Naval Operations.

Under the Bush plan, the Joint Chiefs would be directly under the Secretary of Defense and serve as a staff agency, and not in line of command, which he feels should run directly from the President as Commander-in-Chief to the Secretary of Defense, and then to the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force, thus insuring complete civilian control of the military services. Dr. Bush feels that the staff of the Joint Chiefs should be permanently assigned, so that the officers on this duty would have no primary allegiance to the service in which they were originally commissioned. He also thinks that the Secretary of Defense should be given a larger military staff.

Dr. Bush states the following principles as those which should govern any well-ordered organization, particularly a military organization:

1. The military organization in our democracy must be subordinate to the civilian authority.
2. Authority and responsibility must go together.
3. There is need of staff for advice and there is need for a line of command. These elements must be kept separate. Parallel lines of command must be avoided.
4. Any person carrying enormous responsibility must have available prompt advice from a competent, loyal staff and must be able to issue his orders through subordinates of his own choosing.
5. The entire organization should focus in the Commander-in-Chief, execute his decisions, and carry out his delegations.
6. The effectiveness of functioning should be reviewed by elected representatives, who control the public purse, who ensure that the organization is well manned and works well, but who do not superimpose their judgment on that of professional men.

Our present organization, Dr. Bush contends, violates many of these principles, and could violate them all. He objects to the provision requiring the Joint Chiefs to report both to the President and to the Secretary of Defense. He points out that there are two lines of command, and that control by civilian Secretaries is, to some extent, circumvented. He declares that the Joint Chiefs are understaffed, and that its chairman has no authority, in that he cannot resolve disagreements, and cannot even select the membership of subordinate planning agencies.

Dr. Bush declares that it is essential to have a single field commander, such as we now have in Korea and Europe, directing forces of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. This commander, he asserts, should be appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Joint Chiefs, but he should report only to the President and the Secretary of Defense, rather than to the Joint Chiefs.

With reference to the relations between the military and Congress Dr. Bush objects to the tendency of Congress to enter directly into the management and the making of military decisions, a function for which it is not, as a body, qualified to exercise. He said such interference by Congress has often been due to a feeling that plans are not being well formulated and executed, but he insists

Gen. Crittenberger to Retire

Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, Commanding General of the First Army, announced this week that he will retire from active military service on 31 Dec., 1952.

General Crittenberger, who has served 40 years in the Army in every grade from lieutenant to general, will reach the statutory retirement age for officers of his rank in December. He is the Army's senior lieutenant general and ranking Armor officer on active duty.

Lt. Gen. Crittenberger

In addition to his duties as First Army Commander, General Crittenberger is Chairman of the Military Delegation of the United States Mission to the United Nations. He has been a committee member since June, 1948 and has been its chairman since March, 1949.

Prior to assumption of his present post, General Crittenberger successively served as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States in the Caribbean from 1945 until 1948, when he was returned to the United States for duty in the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington.

For varying periods since June 1948, the First Army Commander served as Chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board with headquarters in Washington, and also as Deputy Representative for the United States in the military activities of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Acting Chairman of its Standing Group.

During World War II, he commanded the IV Corps in the Italian Campaign. This Corps fought continuously against the German Ligurian Army for 401 days, eventually driving the enemy to overwhelmingly defeat and unconditional surrender on 29 April, 1945.

On 17 Sept. of this year, Constitution Day, General Crittenberger was awarded the Chauncey M. Depew Medal for distinguished public service by the New York Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution.

General Crittenberger is a native of Anderson, Ind. His wife is the former Josephine Frost Woodhull of San Antonio, Tex. Their sons, Lt. Col. Willis D. Crittenberger and 1st Lt. Dale J. Crittenberger are on duty at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. and Ft. Knox, Ky., respectively. A third son, Cpl. Townsend Woodhull Crittenberger was killed in action with the 745th Tank Battalion of the 1st United States Division of the Remagen Bridgehead in March, 1945.

that the remedy lies in reorganizing the machinery to produce sound results. He said that Congress should assure itself that the planning machine operates effectively, and that it be in the hands of capable personnel, able to rise above narrow service interests. Then, he feels there will be far less reason to appeal to the public on controversial matters of a military nature, with all of its concomitant dangers.

"If war should break out in Europe," Dr. Bush concludes, "we need not and should not plan to meet hordes with equal hordes. We must be well in advance in the nature of our weapons and the skill with which we use them. . . . We have many skilled, flexible military officers who are as capable of as advanced thinking in this field as is ever possible. The organizational framework within which they now operate just does not function adequately for its intended purposes."

Col. Edwin D. McCoy, former commanding officer of the Ft. Worth Quartermaster Depot, has assumed command of the Tokyo Quartermaster Depot from Col. Randolph G. Norman, returning Stateside via rotation.

Disclose Details of Army Atomic Artillery Piece

Details concerning the Army's atomic cannon—officially the T131 280 mm. gun—were disclosed this week.

According to ordnance authorities, the gun can give accurate and devastating close support to ground troops never before available in the history of warfare.

It is certain that during Congressional budget hearings next year, great interest will be evidenced in the capabilities of this atomic weapon.

Whereas in the past delivery of atomic weapons has been discussed primarily by Air Force and Navy spokesmen, the Army now will certainly stress its ability to use atomic missiles tactically.

The mammoth weapon is described as an artillery piece for firing both conventional and atomic shells and is reported four times more accurate at long ranges than any mobile artillery piece developed before World War II.

The gun is undergoing tests at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., where conventional shells have been fired.

Army officials emphasize that the gun can deliver an atomic shell on target in all kinds of weather, day or night, unlike an air-delivered atomic bomb.

Carried suspended between two engine cabs, front and rear, which can transport their load on highways at a speed of about 35 miles per hour, the atomic artillery unit is equipped with telephones to permit communication between front and rear drivers while on the move, with the leading transporter driver having control of throttle and brakes for both units, although both can be operated independently.

Although the complete unit ready for traveling weighs about 85 tons, it is not much larger than the heaviest field artillery piece now in service, and can cross bridges capable of carrying any standard piece of equipment in an Army Division. It can travel cross-country as well as on the highways and can fit into a landing ship designed for amphibious operations.

It is reported that the gun can be emplaced and put into action with greater speed than any other heavy field artillery pieces now in use. The gun is so balanced in the vertical by a hydropneumatic equilibrator system that one man can elevate it or depress it by exerting a pressure of not more than 30 pounds on a hand-wheel in case of failure of the power unit normally provided.

The entire carriage is balanced on a turntable equipped with a large steel ball that fits a socket in the carriage, plus three jacks with wheels which ride a track around the circumference of the turntable. When jacked up in the rear, the carriage can be rotated horizontally through a complete circle. A gear train operated by a hand-wheel on which no more than 10 pounds of pressure need be exerted traverses the weapon through a smaller arc. The jacks also make it possible to level the gun on uneven terrain.

The projectile and powder charge are loaded into the weapon's breech by means of a hydraulic power rammer though this operation may also be performed by hand.

The gun can give a kind of accurate and devastating close support to ground troops never before available to them in the history of warfare.

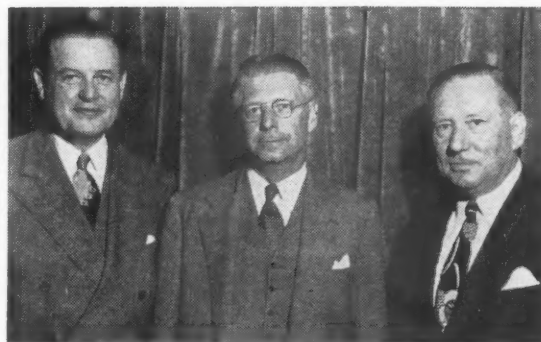

Here are the characteristics of the gun and carriage:

1. Range—about 20 miles.
2. Ammunition—High Explosive and other conventional types in addition to atomic shell.
3. Elevation—0 to 55 degrees.
4. Traverse—360 degrees.
5. Length of carriage (without transporters)—38.5 feet. Length overall (including transporters)—84 ft., 2 inches.
6. Weight—Approximately 85 tons—complete unit.

Characteristics of the T-10 Transporter, comprising the two end-units, are described as follows:

1. Each unit is powered by a six-cylinder Ordnance-Continental air-cooled gasoline engine of 375 gross horsepower.
2. These six-wheeled 4 x 4 units (dual wheels in the rear) which pick up and carry the gun between them, can operate completely independent of each other, but when the carriage and mount assembly is attached, the forward unit has control of the throttle

Newly elected officers of the National Security Industrial Association, left to right: John Jay Hopkins (General Dynamics Corp.), President; J. Frederic Wiese (Lukens Steel Co.), Chairman of the Board of Trustees; and Homer H. Ewing (E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.), Chairman of the Executive Committee.

JOHN JAY HOPKINS, chairman and president of the General Dynamics Corp., was elected President of the National Security Industrial Association at its ninth annual meeting in New York City on 1 Oct. He succeeds J. Frederic Wiese, vice president, Lukens Steel Co., who was elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

The Association, which represents more than 600 companies, was organized originally as the Naval Industrial Association, having been conceived by the late James Forrestal when he was Secretary of the Navy. Subsequently it was broadened to its present title and scope.

Mr. Hopkins, the new president, had long been engaged in production for National Defense. The firm he heads includes both the Electric Boat Company, builder of submarines, and Canadair, Ltd., builder of aircraft. Mr. Hopkins served in the Navy in World War I.

More than 2,000 military and industrial officials from all over the nation participated in the meeting. The gathering was a "reaffirmation of the fact that America's preparedness and security is the joint responsibility of the Department of Defense and the industry of the nation," according to Mr. Wiese, the retiring president.

Principal speaker of the day was Crawford H. Greenewalt, President of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, Inc., who addressed the dinner session in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Luncheon speaker was Maj. Gen. Frank F. Everest who spoke on "The Air War in Korea" where he was Commander of the Fifth Air Force.

The NSIA's Ninth Annual Meeting program included open sessions in the morning where reports on new problems in Materials Handling and Forest Products were presented, and an afternoon session on problems in Military Contracting.

Sponsored by NSIA's Materials Handling Advisory Committee, the morning session on Materials Handling was held under the chairmanship of Warren R. Elsey, Assistant Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. Task Committee reports were heard on "Industrial Trucks," "Marking and Identification of Steel," "Air Cargo Transport" and "Cargo Ship Design."

The Forest Products Advisory Committee's morning session was held in the Waldorf's Jade Room under the chairmanship of C. D. Dosker, President of and brakes for both units.

3. The "A" or front tractor unit has its cab forward in the manner of conventional trucks, while the "B" or rear tractor has its cab at the back of the unit.

4. The payload of the T-10 Transporter is approximately 50 tons.

5. Large carrying capacity in proportion to weight has been achieved through extensive utilization of high tensile, high carbon steels and aluminum. These metals were used not only to accomplish weight reduction but to conserve steel.

6. Although the unit complete with transporters is 84 feet, 2 inches long, the transporters can make right angle turns with their load at city street corners where the streets are only 28 feet wide.

7. The unit as a whole can be moved forward, backward or sideways since either transporter can pull while the other pushes, or they can turn at right angles to the center section and proceed parallel to one another.

Nearly 2200 separate blueprints were required for the gun assembly alone, with accuracy of machining, even on the largest components, held to one-thousandth of an inch on critical dimensions. The principal types of metal used in the carriage include several grades of carbon, high tensile, alloy and stain-

Gamble Brothers, Inc. On the agenda of this meeting was an address by John B. Veach, President of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association on "Industry's Problem with Respect to Military Forest Products Matters." Task Committee reports on Wood Treatment and Preservation and Packaging of Forest Products were also heard.

The afternoon session scheduled by the NSIA's Procurement Advisory Committee heard six papers by company officials on "Problems in Military Contracting." Under the chairmanship of L. A. Connelly, Manager, Government Contracting Section, Radio Corporation of America, the following topics were presented:

Howard Cork, Director of Government Accounting, Westinghouse Electric Corp., spoke on the "Impact of Military Procurement on American Industry."

E. F. Leatham, Assistant to the President, Raytheon Manufacturing Co., spoke on the "Type of Contracts Including Use of Letter Contracts."

B. Edelman of the Western Electric Company spoke on "Problems in Spare Parts and Quality Control."

S. E. Bostwick, Vice President, Edo Corp., spoke on "Application of Cost Principles to Military Contracts."

J. P. Crean, of the M. W. Kellogg Company, spoke on "Termination of Government Contracts."

W. A. Neumann, Jr., Vice President of the De Laval Steam and Turbine Company, spoke on "Problems in Renegotiation."

National officers elected, in addition to Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Wiese, were:

W. S. Morris, Vice President, American Locomotive Co., Vice Chairman of the Board.
R. B. Tucker, Executive Vice President, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., First National Vice President.

H. F. Vickers, President, The Sperry Corp., Second National Vice President.

General J. T. McNarney, USAF-Ret., President, Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp., Third National Vice President.

E. L. Canfield, President, The Sight Light Corp., Secretary.

Maj. Gen. R. L. Maxwell, USA-Ret., Vice President, American Machine & Foundry Co., Treasurer.

Charles F. Benzel, Chairman, Hetherington, Inc., Assistant Secretary-Treasurer.

Homer H. Ewing, Development Department, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., Chairman of the Executive Committee.

C. F. Adams, Jr., President, Raytheon Manufacturing Co., Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee.

less steels plus aluminum, magnesium, bronze, copper, and brass.

The design of a heavy field artillery weapon which would overcome certain deficiencies that were encountered in World War II weapons was initiated by the Chief of Army Ordnance in November 1944. A decision as to desired military characteristics was reached after a feasibility study of several months by artillery, ballistic and Ordnance experts in coordination with the Ordnance Sub-Office, Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.

Technical supervision for preparation of the design and for manufacture of the carriage was officially assigned to Army Ordnance Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, Mass., in March 1947 and design preparations were immediately begun. Army Ordnance Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, N. Y., was at the same time assigned a like responsibility for the gun tube and breech. Direction and coordination of the over-all project remained the responsibility of the Office Chief of Army Ordnance, with the actual designing operations at Franklin Institute jointly supervised by OCO and Arsenal representatives.

Manufacture of a pilot model was begun in 1948.

In compliance with instructions from the Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, design of appropriate changes to accommodate an atomic charge was ordered in November 1949 by the Office of the Chief of Army Ordnance. Preliminary designs prepared accordingly by Office Chief of Ordnance were then turned over to Watervliet Arsenal for final detail, drafting and manufacture.

The first complete assembly with atomic firing capabilities was ready for testing in the spring of 1951.

Navy to Add Guided Missiles to Fleet

The U. S. Navy will add three types of guided missiles to the Fleet next year, and Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball revealed this week that the first guided missile ship has been launched.

At a press conference in Paris, Mr. Kimball confirmed reports that the Navy has developed far more advanced types of guided missiles than those recently used against the enemy in Korea. Of the new types, he said, "we are in a position to use these effectively if need be."

Following Mr. Kimball's disclosure, THE JOURNAL learned that Rear Adm. Thomas S. Combs, Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, has told Congress that the Navy plans to put three types of guided missiles into use during 1953, including not only "the first ship-to-surface missile" but a ship-to-air missile and an air-to-air missile, as well.

Admiral Combs told a Congressional committee that the introduction of the newly developed guided-missile weapons will bring about "significant improvements in our methods of warfare." He said "a number of fleet units" will be outfitted next year with equipment "to augment their present striking power with the capabilities of the new guided-missile weapons now available."

"Introduction of the weapons into the fleet, he said, will alter other units as well. He said their use "will necessitate extensive changes in the equipment of our fleet combat-squadrons and of their supporting units."

In Paris, where he stopped off on a European tour, Secretary Kimball declined to name the guided missile ship which he said has been launched. He noted that "it is primarily an anti-aircraft ship" and said "It has been launched and is in being and others are under construction."

May Be Mississippi

Some observers believe that Mr. Kimball had in mind the old battleship Mississippi, which has been converted for guided missile use and is now based at Norfolk, Va.

Formerly the BB-41, the Mississippi is now designated AG-128 and was operationally rated as an EAG earlier this year. Neither designation has any meaning with relation to guided missiles; AG stands for "auxiliary, miscellaneous" and the additional "E" indicates that the

Army Halves OCS Strength But All Schools Continue

The Army has reduced by more than half the Officer Candidate School quota for the remainder of 1953, although all of the nine OCS facilities will be continued for the present. A prediction that the OCS program would be reduced was made in THE JOURNAL on 6 Sept.

The action was taken because a steadily increasing number of Reserve officers on active duty are voluntarily extending their tours and other thousands of officers have come on duty or are slated to enter service from the Reserve Officer Training Corps.

Because of the shortage of engineers, the Engineer OCS at Ft. Belvoir, Va., has been given the smallest reduction, Army officials reported this week.

Total OCS quotas, which were about 3,800 for the previous three months, will be 1,600 for October, November and December.

Simultaneously, it was stated that "the already high standards for selection of candidates have been raised." This undoubtedly means that some enlisted personnel, previously tagged for OCS, will not be able to attend courses because of the cutback.

Careful explanation of the reasons behind the OCS reduction will be necessary by commanders in the field to avoid a morale problem. Obviously, a number of enlisted men will be disappointed, including some ordered back from overseas to attend OCS courses this fall.

Curtail EUCOM Tours

Beginning 1 April 1953

Headquarters, U. S. Army, Europe, has announced that, effective 1 Apr. 1953, the Foreign Service tours of personnel who had their tours extended involuntarily last June will be progressively curtailed so that USAREUR personnel will be on a normal, 36-month overseas tour by 1 Oct. 1953.

USAREUR officials said that the extended tours will be shortened next year in approximately equal monthly steps during the period 1 Apr. to 1 Oct.

Column 1 of the following schedule lists current rotation dates, while Column 2 shows the new rotation month. The schedule applies only to personnel who have not been granted a voluntary extension of their overseas tour in addition to the involuntary six-month extension.

Individuals with a rotation date on or after 1 Oct. 1953, because of a voluntary extension of overseas tour in addition to the six-months' involuntary extension will have their tour shortened by six months.

Col. Hayes to Leave D. C.

Herbert R. Tumin, who is now in Japan, where he has been attached to 8th Army Headquarters. The transfers were announced at the District Building by the Engineer Commissioner, Brig. Gen. Bernard L. Robinson.

During his stay at the District Building, Colonel Hayes has been closely identified with the reorganization of the District Government, redevelopment of Civil Defense, and the coordination of slum clearance and redevelopment. But he has been the Commissioner's number one trouble-shooter on all engineering problems. Colonel Hayes was ordered to Casablanca last December, but these orders were cancelled due to his work on the District's reorganization plan. He has now been assigned as Executive Officer of the Southwestern Division, Corps of Engineers, and will be stationed in Dallas, Tex.

Army Wins Grid Tilt

The Army football team meets UCLA today at Los Angeles for its second game of the season, after defeating South Carolina, 28-7, last week-end at Michie Stadium.

With a sparkling offense, and a defense which shows more promise than was anticipated, the West Pointers proved that they have come a long way with their rebuilding program. South Carolina, one of the stalwart teams in the Southern Conference, managed only twice to penetrate Cadet territory deeply—once on their only scoring play of the game.

The game's biggest thriller came with the kick-off when Cadet defensive half-back Jerry Hagan took the ball on his own 16 and tromped 84 yards for the score. He was aided by Neil Chamberlin, defensive end, who threw the key block at about the Army 45.

The Cadets scored again midway in the first quarter when Lowell Sisson hauled in a pass from Pete Vann and scampered 57 yards for the touchdown. Both conversions were booted by Rox Shain, and the score was 14-0, Army, at the end of the quarter.

In the second period, the Cadets were stopped on the ground and forced to kick from their own 9. The Gamecocks, starting from their 50, moved to the Army 26 in five plays, Johnny Grambling passed 32 yards to Clyde Bennett and it was a TD for South Carolina. Late in the period, the Cadets added their third score after John Krause intercepted a Gamecock pass on the SC 13. Three plays later, Paul Schweikert plunged over from the 2. Again Shain converted.

At the start of the second half, South Carolina appeared to bog down. Final score of the game was in the third quarter when Army drove 74 yards from its 26 after Don Fuqua recovered a Gamecock fumble. It was Schweikert again who scored, after carrying the ball four successive times from the SC 19. The longest play of the march was a 19-yard run by Vann. The conversion was booted by Shain and the scoring ended with Army at 28 and the Gamecocks, 7.

main branches, Industrial and Internal.

The operations of the Agency are carried on through seven regional offices most of which also have Industrial and Internal Audit Divisions. The Agency is one of the largest auditing organizations in the world. It is authorized a total strength of 2,394, with about 1,900 on duty at the present time.

The mission of the Army Audit Agency is to render an auditing service on an Army-wide basis. Within the Zone of Interior the Agency is charged with both operational performance and technical supervision of both internal auditing and industrial contract auditing. The Agency is charged with only technical supervision of auditing in overseas commands. This mission is carried out through the two branches, Industrial and Internal.

The Industrial Audit Branch develops, coordinates, and prescribes policies and procedures for and supervises performance of the contract audit program. This program consists of the audit of current, completed and terminated Department of the Army contracts and related industrial property accounts with commercial organizations, state and local governments, and educational and research institutions. In the regional offices, the Industrial Audit Division renders the following service:

- Accounting counsel at pre-contract conferences and at settlement negotiation conferences.
- Surveys of contractors accounting systems.
- Audit of cost voucher claims of cost type contracts.
- Audits of cost statements submitted by contractors for price redetermination purposes.
- Audits of termination claims.
- Audits of claims resulting from contract change orders.
- Audits of partial payment requests.
- Overhead rate studies.
- Time and material contract rate studies.
- Advance payment account audit.
- Fraud audit.
- Audits of hardship and other special claims authorized by statutes.
- Audits of price escalation claims.
- Audits of subcontractor claims.

From this wide scope of endeavor, the Army Audit Agency industrial contract auditor gains extensive versatility in audit techniques. His job requires a broad accounting knowledge and ability to audit and verify cost accumulated by various cost accounting systems and methods such as job order costs, process costs, estimated costs, and standard costs. It requires a knowledge of appropriate methods for apportioning overhead and interdepartmental service expenses. It also requires a knowledge of balance sheet audit techniques where costs are involved such as a proper evaluation of material inventory control and accuracy of material inventory as determined by physical inventory taken or by perpetual inventory records maintained. He must understand the financial effects of the various inventory pricing techniques, the audit of reserves for depreciation and related plant and equipment accounts, reserves for amortization of emergency facilities, and of accruals and deferrals. Needless to say, this kind of work takes the highest type of accountants and auditors. There are presently a number of Certified Public Accountants on the staff of the Army Audit Agency, however, there has been some difficulty retaining this type of personnel, because industry hires them at higher salaries.

The major portion of the manhours consumed by industrial contract auditors are devoted to the audit of cost type contracts and contracts with price redetermination clauses.

At the present time the extensive use of price redetermination articles in procurement contracts has resulted in such a tremendous audit workload that it will be necessary to recruit additional auditors to take care of it properly. Reports submitted by the regional offices disclosed that as of 1 July 1952 there were 4,214 active contracts and subcontracts subject to price redetermination with a total value of $8,952,425,000 or an average of over $2,000,000 per contract. Price redetermination audits, though the largest, are only one of the segments making up the industrial audit workload. As of 1 July 1952 there were 3,245 cost type contracts under audit having an estimated cost of $4,086,252,000.

Public Law 216, 81st Congress, better known as the National Security Act Amendments of 1949 resulted from the work of the Hoover Commission. This law provides among other things for internal auditing. The mission of internal auditing in the Army was promptly passed to the Comptroller of the Army who in turn gave it to his Audit Division. It is to be noted that the definition of internal auditing as shown in paragraph 3 of AR 36-5 provides that it is essentially an independent evaluation and appraisal of the accounting and financial operations of the Army. These operations cover the following functions:

- Appropriation and fund accounting.
- Property and inventory accounting.
- Cost accounting.

Navy Board Soon to Pick New Commanders

A Navy selection board to name officers for promotion to commander is expected to be convened late this month or early in November, THE JOURNAL learned this week.

Although plans have not received final approval, it is anticipated that the board may meet on 28 October. If approval is not forthcoming prior to that time, the board can be expected to meet early next month.

Last year's board, which selected more than one thousand lieutenant commanders for promotion, took almost a month to complete its work. It was convened on 9 Oct., and the selections were approved on 3 November. The 1952 board probably will not end its work before late November at the earliest.

The delay in establishing a firm date for the board has been attributed to the restrictions imposed by the Davis Rider to the 1953 appropriations bill. Under this regulation, the Navy will be permitted to have only 7,071 commanders on active duty during the last three months of the current fiscal year.

Previously, the Navy noted that the Davis amendment will cause a reduction in promotions to the grade of commander by "about 40 per cent of that planned." No indication was made as to either the number originally planned or the number now to be selected.

In disclosing the effects of the Davis Rider on promotions, the Navy also pointed out that some USNR captains and commanders would be released from active duty to make room for promotions to those grades. At that time, it was intimated that the RAD procedures would not be put into full force until March, at which time the full effect of the Davis amendment will be felt. However, the number of commanders being relieved of active duty has increased. During the last seven days of September, 30 commanders were handed RAD orders. In the same period of time, 33 lieutenant commanders also were relieved of active duty.

No promotion zone has been made public for the scheduled board, but it is known that the zone will extend from Lt. Comdr. Charles F. Vance downward; probably through all of the 1941 Naval Academy graduates, and possibly into the 1942 group.

Some speculation has been raised that the board will also consider WAVE lieutenant commanders for promotion for the first time since 1949. At present, the Navy has a number of male commanders whose original date of rank was 1942 and 1943, and even one who was first commissioned in 1944, whereas the great bulk of the WAVE lieutenant commanders were first commissioned in 1942.

Last year, the board to name new commanders not only did not consider WAVE officers, but neither did it consider women lieutenant commanders of either the Medical or Supply Corps. Despite these facts, however, THE JOURNAL learned that the 1952 boards probably will by-pass the WAVE's again.

Gen. Robillard Retires

Brig. Gen. Fred S. Robillard, USMC, 62, was retired from the Marine Corps this week in two-star rank after more than 35 years' active service.

Former Commanding General of the Marine Corps Depot of Supplies at San Francisco, General Robillard is a pioneer Marine aviator and World War I winner of the Navy Cross.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marines in December 1917, following a brief enlisted period in the Marine Corps Reserve Flying Corps. During World War I, he flew on the Belgian front with the Allied Northern Bombing Group.

New 'Copters for MAG-36

Marine Air Group 36, based at the Marine Corps Air Facility, Santa Ana, Calif., has completed a transcontinental ferrying project which netted 12 new helicopters for the group.

Twenty-four pilots and a number of crew chiefs were dispatched from Santa Ana earlier this month to Quantico, Va., to pick up 12 new Sikorsky 'copters and ferry them back to the MCAF. They returned with the "flying eggbeaters" last week.

Col. William D. Roberson, CO of MAG-36, directed the operation. The group left Quantico on 17 Sept., traveling in groups of four, and making five stops during the six-day trip to the West Coast.

Pilots who made the trip were: Colonel Roberson; Maj. R. R. Ayers, A. J. Aune, A. L. McVicar, A. A. Black, W. R. Rozier, J. K. Sinderholm, C. C. Samis, C. Coon, and M. D. Hill; Capt. L. Reese, R. W. Day, G. W. Simpson, C. H. Lunan, R. Rigutto, J. P. Bruce, R. W. Allen, R. D. Dallam, W. R. Quinn, H. G. McRay, and R. N. Thorson; Lt. M. C. Nowack; and M/Sgt. J. A. Vittito and J. A. Conroy.

C/S To Adm. Fahrion

Capt. John McN. Taylor, USN, relieved Capt. Olin Scoggins, USN, 25 Sept. as Chief of Staff and Aide to Vice Adm. F. G. Fahrion, USN, Commander, Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, on board the flagship USS Pocono (AGC-16) berthed at the Norfolk Naval Base.

Sergeant Majors Shift

M/Sgt. G. C. Snodgrass, USMC, has been assigned as Sergeant Major of HMR-162 at MCAF, Santa Ana, Calif. He was succeeded as Sergeant Major of MAG-16 by M/Sgt. Clyde S. Vale, formerly stationed at Treasure Island.

Regular Commissions Go to 524 Marines

The final increment of Marine Corps temporary and Reserve officers selected for integration into the Regular Marine Corps was announced this week, following approval by the Secretary of the Navy.

The group, numbering 524, includes 237 first lieutenants and 287 second lieutenants. In addition, 38 first and second lieutenants (all Naval Aviators) were selected as alternates.

Those named were:

SUPER SUBS

At its great Groton, Connecticut yards, Electric Boat is now constructing new fleet type submarines for the U. S. Navy. The big craft are streamlined and modern in every conceivable way. Snorkels, radar and sonar of the latest design give them vastly increased operational and combat effectiveness.

Building these super subs is only one of Electric Boat's activities in the strengthening of hemispheric defenses. The division is engaged in developing and producing undersea craft of new and revolutionary types. At Canadair Limited, a subsidiary of the corporation, jet and other military planes are being turned out for the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force.

Navy Wins First Grid Game

The Naval Academy football team will launch its second game of the season today against Cornell at Ithaca, N. Y., after soundly trouncing Yale, 31-0, last weekend at Baltimore.

By their decisive win over the Eli last Saturday, the Midshipmen left sports writers predicting that the Academy will have its best season in many years. The victory was the first opening-season win which the Navy has scored since 1926, and the third time it has beaten Yale in nine tries. Last year the two teams battled to a 7-7 tie.

Using the single wing, the "T" and the box (and Coach Erdelatz said this week still other varied formations will be used later on), the Midshipmen cracked across the goal line three times in the final quarter. Navy defense, also, was excellent; Yale gained only six yards by rushing.

PMS&T at Univ. of Akron

Lt. Col. A. L. Hugins has been recently appointed Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University of Akron, Ohio, it was announced by Dr. Norman P. Auburn, president of the University.

Col. Hugins has just returned from a tour of duty in the Caribbean Command, the last year and a half of which was served as Executive Officer of the Puerto Rican Replacement Command. Research Rides a Rocket

The Naval Research Laboratory's Viking rocket research at White Sands Proving Grounds, N. M., hunts facts, figures and formulas in the upper atmosphere.

HURTLING far into the blue, Naval Research Laboratory rockets ask questions of the earth's upper atmosphere . . . flash back the answers needed to guide the designers of tomorrow's piloted and pilotless super-altitude systems for peace or war. What are the pressures and temperatures of the earth's atmospheric layers . . . the high-altitude changes in the earth's magnetic field affecting navigational instruments . . . the alterations in radio waves caused by the ionosphere . . . the effects of sun spots on communications equipment out beyond the filtering effects of the earth's heavy atmosphere?

Martin Viking rockets play a major role in this high-altitude flight research program. Last summer, the Viking cracked the world's altitude record for single-stage rockets . . . nosing 136 miles into the heavens at a top speed of 4100 m.p.h. Now, an even more powerful Viking is being readied for launching. The Martin Company is proud to be a partner with the Naval Research Laboratory in these vital activities . . . helping to prove that America's most valuable secret weapon is its scientific leadership! Castings Needed for Missiles

Guided missiles open a wide new field for castings, Brig. Gen. William T. Hefley, USAF, told the American Foundrymen's Society last week at the organization's meeting in Columbus, Ohio.

General Hefley, who is assistant for materiel program coordination at Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio, said castings, being "the cheapest method of fabrication known," will provide a cheap disposable container for guided missiles.

The missile, he said, is a one-shot weapon. "We must keep its cost to a bare minimum, concentrate necessary expenditure upon the vital elements of warhead and guidance mechanism. For quantity production we will be shopping for the cheapest disposable container that will do the job. Everything points to the foundry industry as the logical place to get it, if you have continued to keep pace with our defense needs."

Stressing the growing importance of castings, General Hefley said, "I am told that aluminum castings capable of withstanding pressures of 70,000 pounds per square inch will shortly be produced. One of the experimental projects with which our industrial planning people have recently worked with Northrop Aircraft and Aluminum Company of America is a wing section 16 feet long of exacting tolerances, cast from AZ-92 magnesium alloy.

"We are keeping our minds open for anything that will give us progressive foundrymen to expand the applications of industry techniques and its mobilization potential was never greater."

He paid high tribute to the foundry industry, pointing out that while other defense industries were discovering it was expedient to decentralize, for security reasons, the foundrymen already were dispersed throughout the country.

Red Air Force Reserve

The Soviet Union is building a powerful Air Force Reserve, which now numbers about a million persons, according to an article in the current issue of the Air Reservist Magazine, official publication of the Continental Air Command.

The Red Air Force Reserve is being continually expanded by assignment of personnel from the Regular Air Force. In Russia, all able-bodied men from 19 to 50 years of age must perform military duty. When tours are completed in the Regular AF, personnel are transferred automatically to the Reserve, which is divided into two categories, First Line and Second Line Reserves.

Air Equip. Demonstration

A coast-to-coast aviation equipment training program, designed to familiarize employees of major American aircraft factories with approved test and installation procedures on new electronic equipment being manufactured for the Armed Forces by RCA Victor, was announced this week by the Engineering Products Department.

Engineers of RCA Victor's Government Communication and Navigation Section will fly the special equipment in the company's DC-3 plane to more than a dozen major aircraft manufacturing centers, beginning this week and continuing throughout October. Demonstrations have been tentatively scheduled at the following plants:

Chase Aircraft Co., Inc., West Trenton, N. J.; Republic Aviation Corp., Farmingdale, L. I., New York; Fairchild Aircraft Division, Hagerstown, Md.; Bellair Aircraft Corp., Buffalo, N. Y.; Kaiser-Fraser Corp., Willow Run, Mich.; McDonald Aircraft Corp., St. Louis, Mo.; Boeing Airplane Co., Wichita, Kans., and Seattle, Wash.; Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp., San Diego, Calif., and Ft. Worth, Tex.; Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Marietta, Ga., and Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, Md. In addition, a series of demonstrations is scheduled at the RCA Auditorium in Hollywood, Calif., for employees of Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., of Santa Monica; Lockheed Aircraft Corp., of Burbank; Northrup Aircraft, Inc., of Hawthorne, Calif., and North American Aviation, Inc., of Los Angeles.

TAC Chaplains Meeting

Thirty chaplains from tactical Air Command bases will convene at Langley AFB, Va., on 8 and 9 October to attend a TAC chaplain training conference, according to an announcement by General John K. Cannon, TAC commander.

The two-day program, being planned by Chaplain (Col.) Palmer P. Pierce, TAC command chaplain, will feature a banquet address on 8 Oct. by the chief of Air Force chaplains, Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles I. Carpenter. General Cannon will deliver the opening address.

Speakers in addition to Generals Cannon and Carpenter and Colonel Pierce will be Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Edward R. Fitzgerald, deputy command chaplain; Chaplain (Maj.) Luther D. Fletcher, Headquarters, Eighteenth Air Force; Chaplain (Capt.) John L. George, 131st Fighter Bomber Wing, George AFB, Cal.; Chaplain (Maj.) Vernon O. Rogers, Langley AFB chaplain, and Chaplain (Maj.) Harold D. Shoemaker, 435th Troop Carrier Wing, Miami International Airport.

Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., Commanding General of the Fifteenth Air Force, at informal ceremonies at March AFB, Calif.

In the presence of his widow, Mrs. Emily O'Brien, 550 Weber St., Pomona, Calif., and staff officers of the headquarters, General O'Donnell pinned the emblem of one of the nation's highest awards on the chest of Captain O'Brien's eight-year-old son, Jonny.

Prepare Regs for AFR Uniform Allowance

The October issue of the Air Reservist, official publication of the Continental Air Command, gives details concerning preparations to pay uniform allowances to Reservists as provided by the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952.

The ConAC announcement states:

"Tentative plans call for all officers on active military service entitled to the allowance to be paid by the finance officers handling their individual pay accounts. The AF Finance Center itself proposes to pay eligible Reserve officers not now on active service and those who have completely severed their connection with the AF and its reserves. Application details have yet to be settled upon by all services.

"AR Reserve officers commissioned on or after 1 Jan. 53, will be entitled to a $200 uniform and equipment allowance upon completion of 14 drill periods of not less than 2 hours each, or, upon entry on active service 90 days or more.

"The law further provides that for each time of entry or re-entry on active duty or active duty training on or after 25 June 50, for more than 90 days, a $100 allowance will be paid under certain conditions. The reservist must not have received an initial allowance in excess of $200 or have been on active duty for a period of more than 90 days within 2 years prior to entering his current tour of active duty.

"Reserve officers who came on active duty after 25 June 50 and are no longer in that status will be eligible for the $100 allowance if their tour of active duty was preceded by at least 2 years of no active duty and if no uniform allowance had been received during that period. Officers currently on active duty who meet the above qualifications also are eligible.

"Persons not on active duty who serve in an active status in a Reserve component after 9 July 52 (now, Organized Air Reserve; later Ready Reserve) for 4 years, will receive an additional uniform and equipment maintenance allowance of $50. In this period there must be at least 28 days of active duty or active duty training which requires wearing of the uniform. It does not include any period of active duty or active duty training of more than 90 days duration."

Basic Jet School

Brig. Gen. Gabriel P. Disoway, USAF, Commanding General of the Flying Training Air Force, announced this week that Greenville AFB, Miss., will be converted to a Basic Single-Engine Jet School in Jan. 1953.

The Graham Aviation Company, now operating a contract for primary flying training at Greenville, will move its operations to Marianna, Fla., to continue primary flying training for the Air Force.

Graduates of the new jet training station at Greenville will be commissioned there as second lieutenants in the Air Force upon completion of training.

Approximately 1,000 military and civilian personnel will be required at Marianna to conduct training for about 500 students.

Planned strength of the Greenville base is approximately 3,000, including 400 civilians and 500 students.

Per Diem Disapproved

The Comptroller General has ruled, in decision B-107309, that personnel transferred with their organization from their permanent station for temporary training purposes do not have per diem payment accrue to them. The decision grew out of a claim of Lt. William E. Woods, USAF, for the period 3 Dec. 1950 to 2 July 1951. The official digest of the decision follows:

"An Air Force officer who, with his organization, underwent a temporary change of station for training purposes due to lack of space at his proper station, is not entitled to per diem under paragraph 3c (1), Army Regulations 35-4820, for performing duty with his assigned organization at the temporary location; neither is such officer entitled to per diem, incident to such temporary duty, under the Joint Travel Regulations which became effective during the period of relocation."

Air Base CO Names Group of Service Wives to Advise on Management

Formation of a new advisory group to assist Col. John H. Bundy, commanding officer of Craig AFB, Ala., in his multiple management program took place last week with the naming of eight military wives to a committee.

Selected from among the ranks of officers' and noncommissioned officers' wives, those who will comprise the Military Wives Council will work toward serving in an advisory capacity to the Wing Commander on problems that are of primary interest to the military wives of the military organization.

Charged with writing their own constitution the ladies of the council have been requested by Colonel Bundy to: (1) bear in mind the purpose of the council, (2) concentrate on problems which may generate within the Military Wives Council be put in the form of recommendations that are concise, well defined courses-of-action for the Wing Commander.

Membership on the council is representative of a broad field of officers' and noncommissioned officers' wives. Colonel Bundy expressed a desire to have both the president of the Woman's Club and the NCO Wives' Club as members of the council during the tenure of their office. In addition to these two specific members there will be those who reside on the base, residents of the housing project on the base and those who live adjacent to the base. It is also the desire of Colonel Bundy that members of the council be those with children and those without. In arranging a membership of that nature Colonel Bundy feels that all problems which might arise can be dealt with in a broad sense.

The initial council consists of Mrs. James H. Hunter, Mrs. Norman C. Opp, Mrs. Marlyn Gardner, Mrs. Jacob E. Beville, Mrs. Billy H. Woods, Mrs. James W. Grady, Mrs. Lowell O. Amundson and Mrs. Ralph S. Cartledge. Mrs. Hunter, president of the Woman's Club, will act as chairman of the council until such time as the council is formed and a permanent chairman elected.

Radar Observer-Bombardiers

Two courses to train radar observer-bombardiers for the U. S. Air Force will begin at Sheppard AFB, Tex., on 3 Nov., Maj. Gen. Eugene L. Eubank, commanding general of the Technical Training Air Force (TTAF), has announced.

One course is a refresher for officers previously rated as bombardiers or navigators. The other is a longer course for aviation cadets and officers without previous observer-type training. Both courses employ B-25's as training planes.

While Sheppard is primarily an airplane and engine mechanics' training base under TTAF, the observer courses will be conducted under jurisdiction of the Flying Training Air Force, General Eubank reported.

Jet Aces From Reserves

The Reserve Forces have supplied seven of our 20 jet aces in Korea, Lt. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, chief of Continental Air Command, told members of the Wings' Club at their first autumn luncheon in New York. O. M. (Red) Mosier, Vice President of American Airlines, was toastmaster.

General Johnson said five Air Force Reserve pilots and two from the Air National Guard have shot their way to acedom in combat with Communist jets. "In fact, our twentieth jet ace, acclaimed this last week-end, is from the Oklahoma Air National Guard," he added.

Allison jets power first mass refueling flight

Confidence in the dependability of Allison jet engines is again demonstrated by history's biggest transoceanic jet plane flight. Three squadrons of Republic F-84C Thunderjets completed the 10,895-mile movement, across vast expanses of the Pacific, from Turner Air Force Base, Georgia, to Tokyo. En route, pilots of the Thirty-First Fighter Escort Wing successfully completed air-to-air refuelings—first ever attempted on a mass flight.

This history-making flight, including 2,400 miles nonstop from California to Honolulu, demonstrates the mobility of American air power—and adds new laurels to the battle-proved record of the famed Allison J35 engine.

However, it is known that the Mississippi is equipped with both rocket and guided missile launching devices and that it has been outfitted with the latest electronic gear. Recently, the vessel completed a shakedown cruise, and it is possible that it has passed out of the "training ship" stage in which the Navy has had it classified and is ready for use with the Fleet.

Two cruisers, the Boston and Canberra, are now being converted into guided missile ships at the York Shipbuilding Corp., Camden, N. J., but neither has been completed the Navy said this week. Additionally, the Navy has two guided-missile submarines, the Cusk and Carbonero, and a converted seaplane tender, the Norton Sound. The latter vessel, known as the "Buck Rogers" ship, has been used as a floating laboratory for guided missile and rocket experiments since early 1949.

Mr. Kimball said in his last semi-annual report that all of the Navy's guided missile projects have been accelerated toward early use.

Honor AF Medico

In a colorful ceremony Friday night, 26 Sept., in New York City, Capt. Gustav C. Bahn of the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph Field, Tex., became a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. By his election, Captain Bahn joins a professional group which includes the nation's leading surgical specialists.

Commissioned in the Air Force Reserve in 1950, Captain Bahn was assigned to the School of Aviation Medicine. He is a member of the department of Ophthalmology at the aeromedical institution. His home is at 109 West Oakview Place in San Antonio.

Another View on Air Base Construction.

One month ago the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee issued a report charging an inordinate amount of waste, inefficiency, and delay in connection with the construction of Air Bases in Morocco. They went so far as to demand that the Secretary determine whether disciplinary action should be taken against any of the officers who worked on the project.

This week the Subcommittee on Military Public Works of the House Committee on Appropriations, after an exhaustive study, issued its report on the same project. The following excerpts from the House Committee's conclusions reveal a more level, sound and understanding view—more particularly impressive when it is noted that it comes from the committee which must pass on the provision of funds for such purposes. The Committee said:

"No other job in the committee's recollection has received the amount of adverse criticism and publicity which has been given to the Moroccan project. Some portions of the criticism have been justified. There were instances of lack of control, supervision, and inspection resulting in some sub-standard work. These, however, have been emphasized out of all proportion to their extent. The tremendous amount of good work done has been largely ignored, and the true conditions under which the job had to proceed have been relegated to the background. The result has been that many of those in on-the-ground charge of this effort have been accused of incompetent performance or improper conduct. Criticism to this degree is unfair and is not supported by the record. During the same period that the job had been labeled a 'fiasco' (the course of 1 year of construction), a tremendous amount of satisfactory runway, taxiway, apron, and other paving work had been placed. The other work done in buildings built and petroleum and other systems installed will not be repeated here. All of this in sheer bulk was unquestionably the result of a great deal of forceful drive, know-how, and leadership. * * *

"Those who sit in judgment should recollect the atmosphere of world tension existing in 1950 and 1951. There was grave apprehension that a third world war was about to begin and that it would find this Nation in a serious condition of unpreparedness. This was the state of affairs under which the work began rather than the calmer moments in which we evaluate decisions taken with the benefit of hindsight. * * *

"So far as Morocco is concerned, the committee feels that a substantial injustice has been done by making the Corps of Engineer officers the whipping boys of this operation."

Service to the Nation. The wide acclaim that has come to Vice Adm. Edward L. Cochrane, USN (Ret.), upon his relinquishment this week of his duties with the Federal Maritime Board, not only is well deserved by the Admiral personally, but also points up the great value to the nation of the pool of trained and experienced manpower provided by the retired personnel of the Armed Services.

It will be recalled that Admiral Cochrane served as chairman of the civilian committee which recommended reorganization of the old Maritime Commission. When the reorganization was effected the Admiral was chosen for the dual post of Administrator and Chairman. In his two years in those positions the Maritime organization has functioned superbly. His experience as Chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships served him in good stead when the war in Korea required the building of a fleet of government-owned freighters to aid in carrying war material to the Far East. Now he will return to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, this time to be Dean of Engineering. His two-year tour with the Maritime Board has won the praise of the President, members of Congress, and the press.

In these trying times when there is such a great need for trained, disciplined, and experienced executives, both the government and industry find that they can turn to Retired Service officers with confidence that their tasks will be ably performed.

Loss of Air Force Colonels. There now seems no doubt but that the Air Force is going to permit the retirement axe to fall upon all of those permanent colonels (including temporary brigadier and major generals) who by next June will have a total of 30 years service including five as colonel. Despite the fact that President Truman has signed an executive order giving the Department authority to retain on active duty up to 60 per cent of those affected, responsible officials decline to say what action will be taken. However, it is known that letters have gone out advising officers who come within the category of the law that they will be retired next June.

Only about 50 officers will be forced out, about a third of whom hold advanced rank as temporary generals. Nevertheless, Congress and the public will find it difficult to understand why these trained and experienced men, many of them in their middle fifties, are being taken off the active list at a time when the Air Force is under an expansion program and their services are sorely needed. Certainly, under present emergency circumstances all qualified officers should be permitted to serve until they reach statutory retirement age.

SERVICE HUMOR

An Air Force staff sergeant and his wife, on duty in England went to the commissary to do some shopping. En route from the commissary the sergeant was loaded with packages and was unable to salute his officers. To his astonishment, he noticed that each officer he passed would smile at them. This seemed quite unusual and even more so when a Colonel smiled. At that moment the sergeant glanced at his wife to find that she was saluting each officer that passed and with the wrong hand, no less. When he told her it was improper for her to do this, Mrs. Edwards replied, "Well, dear, I thought that you had to salute them and since you were unable to, I thought I'd do it for you!"

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

The Secretary of the Navy issued an order prohibiting Naval personnel from keeping diaries and ordering the immediate destruction of diaries now in their possession.

50 Years Ago—

The Secretary of the Navy has completed the naval estimates for the fiscal year to end 30 June, 1904 totaling $32,426,030.58. The Secretary has recommended an appropriation of $15,025,632 for construction and machinery for the increase in the Navy.

85 Years Ago—

Boating and baseball have broken out among the cadets at West Point. We learn that the three upper classes are pitted against each other in shell boats, and that the picked nine, in the fourth class, have challenged the whole corps at baseball. It is gratifying to see these more manly sports engaging the attention of cadets, and to state that the barbarous practice of "devilling the plebes" has become entirely extinct.

Taxing the Retired

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

We are told that studies are under way looking to the removal of inequities in the existing pay law. It is to be hoped that the greatest inequity of them all will not be overlooked. It is that which creates a class distinction among retired officers. Two classes are legally recognized, those who get to keep their retired pay and those who must share it with the tax collector.

Why should such discrimination be made? In theory it is a simple act of generosity on the part of a benign government designed to provide an honorarium for those disabled in the service of their country. But is this actually the case? Many of us are in a position to know better. All too many of the "disabled" show no more evidence of disability than others denied the boon of tax exemption. If this is doubted, the Pentagon has already questioned the disabled to ascertain their earning power in industry and the professions, and should be in possession of a fund of information on the subject. Some of us can remember the scurrying and jockeying that went on at the close of hostilities for disability retirements, and the inevitable favoritism and other abuses that ensued. The practical effect of it all is a pay differential between officers of the same rank and service which passes all bounds of reason. Once it was thought that the pay of retired personnel could be determined by consulting the pay tables. It is no longer that simple, since tax exemption is no less valuable a consideration than a check drawn on the Treasury.

The inequity cited reached the smelly point several years ago and the odor has shown no signs of abating. As a corrective, consideration should be given to the following courses: (1) extend tax exemption to all, or (2) abolish all exemptions. The second course would seem to be the more logical, since the first could never be expected to pass Congress.

TAXPAYER

Chaplain Promotion Lag

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am a Chaplain in the Regular Army with over nine years active duty. I have been a Captain over eight years. I have never been considered for promotion nor passed over since the wholesale (for many) promotion policy began in 1950. For promotion to Major, our cut-off date was 31 March 1944 while the cut-off date for the line was 31 Dec. 1946—a difference of two years and nine months. Some of us were fortunate enough to have been recommended for promotion under the so-called five per cent policy, but have heard nothing about that.

There are quite a few Chaplains, both in the Regular Army and Reserve, who are in the same boat with me. We see officers promoted to Major who were two years our junior as Captains, but for many of us we have little for which to look forward. These officers fortunate enough to make Major will be years our senior if we ever make field grade. What is fair about a policy that promotes junior officers and doesn't even consider senior men? I don't feel that those men received something they didn't deserve, because most of them were fine officers. I do feel we deserve something, but received nothing.

We Chaplains are interested in morale, helping others and of being of service to our fellow men. What about our morale? Many of us are ashamed to write to friends and relatives because we have to put Captain on the outside of the letter. We have written that word for too many years.

Britain's Contribution To Defense

BY LT. GEN. H. G. MARTIN
Military Correspondent of the
"Daily Telegraph" (London)

THE United Kingdom is not a member of the European Defense Community. With the best will in the world Mr. Churchill could never commit the United Kingdom to the growing surrender of national sovereignty which membership of such an institution would involve. The Government and Opposition alike have made it clear that they would not accept any such proposal. The United Kingdom is too much involved already with the North Atlantic and Commonwealth communities to contemplate membership in a European Federation as the ultimate goal.

That does mean, however, that Mr. Churchill has changed his mind since, at Zurich six years ago, he first proposed to the European Assembly the immediate creation of a European army "subject to proper unified democratic control"; or since, in 1950 at Strasbourg, he urged that "Britain and the United States must send large forces to the Continent."

These large forces Britain and the United States of America have since sent. Moreover, on 27 May, Mr. Eden signed three instruments whereby the United Kingdom Government is bound to participate in the defense of Western Europe no less fully and permanently than are the members of the European Defense Community. These documents are the E.D.C.-North Atlantic Treaty Organization Reciprocal Guarantee, the E.D.C.-United Kingdom Treaty of Guarantee, and the Anglo-United States of America French Declaration.

Success of Reserve Scheme

The United Kingdom's defense efforts are more than commensurate with these commitments. With a population of 50 millions, the United Kingdom now maintains armed forces whose strength is about one-and-a-quarter millions or nearly 8% of the working population. Of these armed forces, between 525,000 and 530,000 are Regulars who serve for periods varying from 3 to 22 years or more, and some 320,000 are National Service men (conscripts) who serve continuously for two years whole-time with the active forces followed by three-and-a-half years part-time service with the reserve forces. Of the North Atlantic Treaty allies, be it noted, only the United States of America, Greece and Turkey have as long a period of conscript service as two years.

Moreover, this figure of a million-and-a-quarter men now in the active and organized reserve forces by no means tells the whole story. In 1951 and 1952 the British Army—apart from the Royal

The Lessons of MAINBRACE

Oslo, Norway—The very complex operations jammed into 13 days' operation of Exercise MAINBRACE, while reviewed in general terms on its conclusion by Admiral Lynde D. McCormick as SACLANT, General Matthew B. Ridgway as SACEUR, by Admiral Sir Patrick Brind as director of the entire exercise, and by numerous participants and observers, will be turning up solid subjects for reconsideration for a long time to come.

The action which went one way by reason of one man's miscalculation, or by reason of communications' failure at the crisis, could very well have gone the other way by better arrangement or better fortune; the observers' job is to discern these things, and higher echelons' job is to attempt improvements, whether of selection or training or materiel, upon which reliance can be placed in future—perhaps. For as a lively admiral of long experience in battle and peacetime maneuver alike observed quizzically, "Yes, we all learned some unforgettably important things. And on the next exercise when we are somewhere else, our successors will learn those same unforgettably important things all over again."

It would be folly to enumerate the particular things which MAINBRACE demonstrated. There are a great many of them, and some are not properly publishable anyway. But there are generalizations, some by the observant Brind—who has a gift for expression, too—and others by a variety of commanders in the operating forces, which may be rattled off readily enough, such as these:

1. One looks back two years, to the early days of North Atlantic Treaty Organization planning, when there were immense doubts that the western nations could be brought into a state of working together, with all that this involves in financial and material sacrifice, in patience, in organization, in national self-abnegation, in the difficult business of training for a vague future requirement, rather than a present hard actuality such as war provides. General Eisenhower's fine leadership, now followed by General Ridgway's, did much to reduce those doubts. Now, Exercise MAINBRACE has shown that like cooperation is possible among the various nations at sea, and between the sea and air and ground forces; it is possible because it has been achieved in a fortnight's experiment.

2. The Atlantic Command always felt confident that it could lend large aid to the European Command, specifically in the difficult area of the North Sea and its environs. Its confidence is justified by performance, its planning for the future guided by experience this past fortnight.

3. The big carriers, hitherto untested in this area, proved readily capable of performance under a variety of conditions. Limits on their capabilities, mostly surmised, are now clearer, and the tactical doctrines related to this can be studied hereafter with more confidence.

4. Planning, training and operating of large naval forces in support of land forces can be worked out with new data here acquired. There has been no such opportunity since the war (so far as interlacing of commands from so many nations is concerned) and it was time to produce one.

5. Norway and Denmark had an opportunity to see that the NATO nations

UN Offers Three POW Plans

THE Korean armistice conference met in plenary session at Panmunjom last Sunday, 28 Sept., and adjourned for ten days until Wednesday, 8 Oct., to give the Communist delegation an opportunity to consider three new alternative proposals submitted by the Allies, dealing with the repatriation of Red war prisoners, the controversial subject which for months has blocked all progress toward an agreement. However, the Communist delegates, in advance of further consideration, reaffirmed their adamant opposition to voluntary repatriation. This makes it almost certain that there will be a final rejection of the new proposals next week.

In Washington a high official of the Defense Department said there was no optimism in government circles over the prospect for an armistice, and no real expectation of an early settlement of the Korean conflict. In the absence of a truce he indicated that the Allies would continue to apply military pressure, particularly in the air, in the hope that the enemy might be convinced of the futility of the conflict.

The new Allied alternative proposals, submitted to the Reds by Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, jr., USA, senior United Nations delegate to the truce conference, represent no real change in previous offers, but do constitute a face-saving formula which might conceivably be acceptable to the Reds, provided they really want to end hostilities—a doubtful assumption.

The Allies adhere to their original position that there must be no forced repatriation of Red captives, but they propose that the exchange of war prisoners may be conducted in one of three ways, at the option of the Reds. Each proposal makes certain that the desires of the individual prisoners are respected, but assurance is given that no arbitrary decision can be made by the Allies concerning the fate of any person.

Under one alternative the prisoners to be freed would be brought to an agreed exchange point, identified, and checked with approved lists, and then released, with the understanding that they might return to either side, reverting to a civilian status. Transportation would be furnished both for those repatriated and those who choose to remain with the side that captured them. Under another alternative all prisoners desiring repatriation would be expeditiously exchanged. The others would be delivered to a demilitarized zone and interviewed by neutral representatives to ascertain their choice of sides, after which they would be permitted to follow their desires. The third alternative would authorize delivery to a neutral zone of groups of appropriate size of those who objected to repatriation. There these prisoners would be released, without questioning, interview, or screening. Each individual so released would be free to go to the side of his choice without interference.

When these proposals were first submitted at last Sunday's session the Red delegates asked for a recess of two and one-half hours. On the reconvening of the conference North Korean General Nam Il, senior Communist delegate, said he saw no difference in these offers and those previously rejected by the Reds, and he reiterated his objections to voluntary repatriation. However, the Reds accepted General Harrison's suggestion of a ten-day recess, which would permit time for further instructions to the Communist delegates from Moscow and Peking. Screening by the United Nations command indicates that 15,000 of the 20,000 Chinese Communists held as prisoners by the Allies will refuse to return willingly to Red control, and that from 37,000 to 40,000 out of more than 100,000 North Korean prisoners want to remain in South Korea.

THERE ARE INDICATIONS that the Korean war may come up for early discussion at the General Assembly of the United Nations, which meets in New York on 14 October. It had been assumed in some quarters that the General Assembly would mark time, awaiting the outcome of the United States Presidential election before taking up any important international question, since a change of administration might mean a change of policy.

However, it seems quite probable that Secretary of State Dean Acheson will devote a major address to the Korean conflict early in the session of the General Assembly. Whether or not he will make any further truce proposals will probably depend on the situation at the time, but the likelihood is that he will insist that cease-fire arrangements be made at Panmunjom rather than in New York. He is almost certain to urge broader support of Korean military operations by members of the United Nations. This could take the form of active participation in the combat by countries not now participating in the Korean conflict, and by additional forces from countries already actively engaged in the war. Quite possibly the General Assembly may vote to urge acceptance by the Reds of Allied truce proposals.

Recent reports from Korea estimate that from 5,000 to 6,000 Russian military personnel are now in the theater of war. They are believed to be largely technical advisers, assisting in training troops and in imparting knowledge of Russian weapons being used by the Reds. They are reported to be serving with anti-aircraft and support troops, and some are believed to be manning anti-aircraft batteries well behind the lines, and along the Manchurian border. There are persistent, but unverified, reports that some of the pilots of Chinese jet aircraft are Russians.

A North Korean security officer, who recently surrendered to the Allies, said that he had seen a number of Russians in Chinese uniforms in rear areas engaged in training activities. Presumably these Russians might be classed as volunteers, and since they are wearing Chinese uniforms their presence presumably would not involve Soviet neutrality. The Far East Air Force estimates that the Reds now have some 2,500 planes, about 1,500 of them jet interceptors, flying over North Korea from Manchurian bases. This level was reached several months ago.

DR. IVAN KERNO, a Czechoslovak diplomat, who retired in New York on 10 Sept. as a United Nations secretariat official, has stated that he will not return to his Communist-controlled country, and will seek asylum in the United States. Dr. Kern was a close friend of the late President Edward Benes of Czechoslovakia. He quoted Benes as having said that Stalin had once promised that the Soviet Union would never intervene in the internal affairs of Czechoslovakia. Despite this pledge the Communists seized control of the Czech government several years ago in a coup directed by Moscow. Dr. Kern said that President Benes did not use the army against the Reds at that time, lest it result in a Russian invasion, with the massacre of much of the Czech population.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

May Probe General Officer Retirements—A Congressional inquiry may be launched early next year to find out if too many high ranking general officers of the Army and Air Force are being forced to retire prematurely. When confronted with the effects of current law, the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and House likely will call for detailed data to determine whether legislative changes are needed.

Certain to gain notice on Capitol Hill is the fact that within a six months period—unless special exceptions are made—the Army will lose two four-star officers and four lieutenant generals, all of whom will be 60 years of age. Statutory retirement age is 62.

These officers are General James A. Van Fleet, Commanding General, Eighth Army in Korea; General John R. Hodge, Commanding General, Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.; Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, Commanding General, U. S. Army in Europe; Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, Commandant, Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, Commanding General, Second Army, Ft. Meade, Md.; and Lt. Gen. George P. Hays, Commanding General, U. S. Forces in Austria.

In January 1953, in addition to these Army officers, a number of major generals will be retired before reaching the statutory retirement age of 62 because of completion of 5 years in grade and 35 years' service. Most, but not all, of these officers will be 60 years of age.

In the Air Force, a number of key officers, one of them the Vice Chief of Staff, face forced retirement during 1953 upon completion of 5 and 35. General Nathan F. Twining, although he will not reach the statutory retirement age of 62 until 11 Oct. 1959, will have 5 and 35 on 1 Nov. 1953, according to the official Air Force Register.

Other Air Force officers who are scheduled for retirement in 1953 under the same provision include Lt. Gen. William E. Kepner, Commanding General, Alaskan Command, and Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, Commanding General, Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala.; both due to complete active service in February. The official Air Force Register would seem to indicate that General John K. Cannon, Commanding General, Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va., will soon complete 5 and 35, for his promotion list service date is given as 29 Nov. 1917. However, he was not commissioned as a Regular officer until 1 July 1920 and the Reserve time does not count towards the mandatory retirement. General Cannon will reach the statutory retirement age of 62 on 9 March 1954.

To date, the Air Force has given no indication officially that any of the officers scheduled for retirement under the 35 and 5 limitation will be retained on active duty. Barring a major change for the worse in the international situation, these officers presumably will be retired as now scheduled, although only General Kepner will reach the age of 60 prior to retirement.

That it is important to know what policy has been adopted is made clear by an analysis of the section of the Officer Personnel Act pertaining to the mandatory retirement of permanent major generals with 5 and 35. The Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Air Force are given authority to retain on the active list until the age of 60 general officers who otherwise would be retired. It is a known fact that the Army is using this authority in almost all cases.

Another provision of the Officer Personnel Act permits retention of a very limited number of officers serving in temporary grade above that of major general to be retained until age 64 is reached. Under this authority the Army will retain General Thomas T. Handy, Deputy Commander-in-Chief U. S. European Command, who is past 60, and who is slated to retire in March 1954 upon reaching the age of 62.

Aside from the specific authority granted to the Secretaries to make exceptions, the fact that a national emergency now exists automatically makes possible the suspension of any part of the Officer Personnel Act, so that any, or all, of the major generals with 5 and 35 could be retained on active duty.

However, it may very well be that Congress will want to take another look at this discretionary authority, for during the last two years the Senate and House have gone on record as opposed to retirement of career officers before reaching the statutory age. Thus, the appropriations bills for fiscal '52 and '53 contained riders restricting voluntary retirement of officers below the statutory age.

It is to be noted that if the Secretary were not to use the authority to retain any of these permanent major generals until age 60, a number of them could be forced to retire while in their 50's.

Here are some examples: General Matthew B. Ridgway, NATO Commander, will have 5 and 35 by 31 Jan. 1953, but will not be 60 until March 1955. General John E. Hull, Vice Chief of Staff, will also have 5 and 35 by the end of January 1953, but will not be 60 until May 1955.

As for General Mark W. Clark, Far East Commander, he had 5 and 35 on 20 April, but will not be 60 until May 1956.

Aside from the increasing attention Congress is giving to retirement of military officers before reaching the statutory age, it is no secret that the mandatory retirement provisions of the Officer Personnel Act are debated energetically in the Services.

There are many who contend that under present legislation an anomaly results in that the best officers often are retired first, sometimes years ahead of contemporaries. Here is how such a situation comes about:

John Doe and James Smith, born on the same day, 1 Jan. 1893, were graduated from West Point the same day in June 1917 and hold TEMPORARY rank as major general from the same day. But General Doe, on the basis of particularly outstanding service, was promoted to PERMANENT major general two years before General Smith. On 1 Jan. 1953, General Doe will have 5 years in permanent grade after having completed 35 years' service in June 1952 and will be 60 years of age. For him, this means retirement. But General Smith, not made a PERMANENT major general until two years after his classmate, will be able to serve until reaching the statutory retirement age of 62.

All together, it's a complicated problem and one which needs detailed study in view of a world situation quite different from that when the Officer Personnel Act was passed in 1947. That law was designed to meet long-range needs of a relatively small and stable military organization.

It can be anticipated that as the effects of current legislation receive wider

...Recent reports that Defense-officials were unhappy at Bureau of the Budget MEDDLING in programs approved by Congress were supported this week by release of a House Appropriations Subcommittee report on Moroccan Air Base Construction. Said the report: "The committee cannot express too strongly its feeling that the Bureau of the Budget has been less than fair with this committee and the affected executive agencies. Too often it has maintained DOUBLE STANDARDS of funding—one standard to get money appropriated by Congress to be delivered into its hands for apportionment, another standard for the actual apportionment of construction funds. Thus, too often the Bureau has assumed to itself the appropriation functions of Congress."

...The Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Geodetic Survey have yet to be briefed on Pentagon plans concerning the proposed cost-of-living PAY ADJUSTMENT increase. Uniformed personnel of these Services are covered by the Career Compensation Act. It's an obvious OVERSIGHT, certain to be quickly corrected.

...President Truman was tentatively slated to attend a 15 Oct. demonstration at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., for the Army's new 280mm. ATOM GUN. But the edge was taken off this show with premature release this week of pictures and stories. This raised speculation that the Chief Executive, notwithstanding his ARTILLERY INTEREST, might change his plans.

...Dr. Vannevar Bush's challenging speech this week on the JCS ORGANIZATION (details elsewhere) will stimulate interest in the final report of SecDef Lovett.That document is apt to have FAR-REACHING EFFECTS on Capitol Hill next year.

...Army speakers may be more careful in the future about references to the importance of the FOOT SOLDIER. The U.S. Armor Assn. magazine argues that term should be "GROUND SOLDIER."

...No WAVE officer has been PROMOTED TO COMMANDER since 1949 (there are 3 on active duty). The word among the Navy's women is that a FORTHCOMING BOARD will not consider any WAVE lieutenant commander for advancement, even though the majority have over 10 years service.

...Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, USA, former U.S. Military Attache to Moscow, now in a non-command Pentagon assignment, will have 35 years' service and 5 years in PERMANENT GRADE in January '53. He could be retained until 1955 when he reaches the age of 60, but there's little doubt he will be RETIRED following a court martial reprimand this summer.

attention, discussion concerning the mandatory retirement of general officers is going to increase. Undoubtedly, there will be Capitol Hill reaction and it's a good guess now that hearings on this matter will be held early in the 83d Congress.

Dodge JAG Corps Issue—The three members of the U. S. Court of Military Appeals and the Judge Advocates General of the Army, Navy and Air Force have side-stepped temporarily the issue of whether or not to recommend a separate JAG Corps for the Air Force and Navy. Only the Army now has a separate corps for its judge advocates, with a separate promotion list.

The judges and the three JAGs, fulfilling a requirement of law, have reported on the first year's operation under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The report notes that suggestions have been made for "the creation of a separate Judge Advocate General's Corps for the Navy and Air Force; or the abolition of the separate promotion list of the Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Army and restoration of Army Judge Advocates to their proper positions on the Army promotion list."

But no action was taken on the alternate suggestions. The Court said in its report that the judges are "genuinely concerned about the merits of most of the suggested improvements in the Code. In order to make a study of each as far reaching as practicable, a committee of members of the Bar representing the Services and the public is being appointed to assist the Court in arriving at appropriate recommendations."

The Air Force and Navy has resisted efforts in the past to establish separate JAG Corps and may be expected to offer the same opposition in the future. The Army, on the other hand, has supported a separate JAG organization.

VULCAN NEEDED AN ANVIL...

But Philco forged a mighty weapon with a change of name! When the Armed Forces needed vast quantities of Microwave Radio Relay equipment, Philco's standard commercial product met the exacting requirements without change! Philco Advanced Design Microwave already contained JAN-approved components and military type plug-in assemblies. So with only the change of name from Philco Advanced Design Microwave to AN/TRC-30, it was ready for military use.

Philco Microwave equipment is designed for utmost reliability, flexibility and ease of maintenance... qualities demanded without compromise by the Armed Forces. Philco's ability to surpass these rigid standards provided the Armed Forces with an immediate source of vital communications equipment.

Today, as always, forward-thinking Philco stands ready to develop and produce advanced electronics equipment to meet any need of the Government and the Armed Forces.

What it takes to silence a pillbox!

Steel: 90,000 lbs.

Rubber: 1,800 lbs.

Copper: 2,000 lbs.

Bronze: 100 lbs.

Specialized Personnel: 5

A single blast from a 105 mm. howitzer can reduce a pillbox to smoldering silence! This tremendous firepower is awesome... only a mount of great strength can withstand its recoil.

American Machine and Foundry Company's vast manufacturing facilities guide the production of these mounts from initial stage to the time they're ready for action.

AMF is pleased to make its contribution to Army Ordnance. Along with thousands of other companies we are utilizing industrial skill and speed to insure America's military readiness.

Above figures are given with due regard to security.

AMERICAN MACHINE & FOUNDRY COMPANY

Executive Offices, 511 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

AMF does it better—automatically!

CREATORS AND PRODUCERS OF ELECTRONIC AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT FOR THE ARMED SERVICES: Radar antennae and drive units • automatic loaders for Army and Navy weapons • elevating and azimuth mechanisms • cooling fans for Army tanks • airplane parts • mobile ovens • electronic training devices • naval ordnance • rolled and welded steel products • shell components • silver-zinc batteries • special military projects.

to the E. E. or PHYSICS GRADUATE

with military experience

in RADAR OR ELECTRONICS

Here's a good way to capitalize on your military experience upon your return to civilian life.

Hughes Research and Development Laboratories, one of the nation's more prominent electronics organizations, is now creating a number of new openings in an important phase of its operation.

Here is what one of these positions offers you:

1. THE COMPANY

Hughes Research and Development Laboratories is located in Southern California. We are currently engaged in the development of advanced detection devices, electronic computers, and guided missiles. You are probably familiar with some of the equipment we are supplying the services.

2. YOUR POSITION

You will serve as a technical advisor to those using Hughes equipment. In this capacity you would help insure the successful operation of our equipment in the field.

3. YOUR TRAINING

Upon joining our organization, you would work in our Laboratories in Southern California for several months—until you are thoroughly familiar with the equipment.

4. WHERE YOU WORK

After your period of training (at full pay), you may (1) remain at the company Laboratories in Southern California in an instruction or administrative capacity, (2) become the Hughes representative at a company where our equipment is being installed, or (3) be the Hughes representative at a military base in this country—or overseas (single men only).

Compensation is made for traveling and for moving household effects. Married men keep their families with them at all times.

5. YOUR FUTURE

You will gain broad experience that will increase your value to us as we further expand in the field of electronics. Furthermore, the large-scale commercial employment of electronic systems in the next few years is inevitable... and your training and experience in the most advanced electronic techniques with our company now will qualify you for even more important positions then.

HOW TO APPLY

If you are under thirty-five years of age, and if you have an E. E. or Physics degree, with some experience in radar or electronics,

Navy Grants Age Waivers

Age waivers to permit former Organized Naval Reserve enlisted personnel to rejoin Organized units after completion of a tour of active duty will be granted under certain conditions, the Navy said this week. Some Reserve enlisted personnel have found upon returning from active duty that they are too old to qualify for reassignment to the Organized Reserve. The new Reserve Instructions are designed to permit them to resume their former status.

GENERAL Hoyt S. Vandenburg, Air Force Chief of Staff, will be honored at a reception Monday, 6 Oct., by Maj. Gen. Vasco Seco, Chief of Staff of the Brazilian Air Force who has been on a tour of U. S. military installations.

General Seco will be the honor guest at a dinner this evening, Saturday, 4 Oct., at which the host is to be the Brazilian Air Attaché, Brig. Gen. Luiz Netto dos Reis. The Brazilian Ambassador, Senhor Walther Moreira Salles, will be host at a reception at the Embassy 8 Oct., in honor of Brazil's Minister of Marine, Vice Admiral Renato de Almeida Gullobel.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sory Smith have sold their house on Massachusetts Ave., Washington, and taken an apartment at 2500 Que Street, N.W., where they will remain for the winter.

Mrs. Willis Prague Coleman, widow of Colonel Coleman, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thomas J. Johnson, at 1400—28th Street, N.W., Washington, having come from Tampa, Fla., for her annual visit. Later she will spend some time with General and Mrs. Clarence L. Sturdevant at their home, Maplecraft, near Silver Spring, Md.

Mrs. Coleman will also visit at West Point the Assistant Superintendent of Cadets, Col. Harry L. Hillyard, and Mrs. Hillyard, and spend some time with friends in New York.

Mrs. Johnson was hostess at a buffet supper party for Mrs. Coleman Sunday evening at which were present General and Mrs. Sturdevant, Miss Sturdevant, Mrs. J. S. Waddington, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Vera Bovard, Mrs. Ross D. Thompson and others.

A gala luncheon followed by fashion show has been planned for the first meeting of the Air Force Officers Wives' Club on Thursday, 9 Oct., at the Army-Navy Country Club.

The gathering is set for 12:30 P. M., and wives will have opportunity for visiting and meeting newcomers during the social period preceding luncheon. At this time, Mrs. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Honorary President, and Mrs. Marshall S. Roth, President, will greet new members in the lounge. A large hostess committee, headed by Mrs. John H. McCormick, will be on hand to welcome honorary and regular members alike.

Approximately 500 Air Force officers' wives are expected to attend, with additional members arriving for the program which is scheduled at 2:30 P. M.

Seated with Mrs. Vandenberg at luncheon will be the club's officers and committee chairmen who compose the 1952-53 Board of Directors. Mrs. Roth will introduce the Board during a brief business meeting just before the fashion show.

At the request of Mrs. Reginald C. Harmon, Program Chairman, Mrs. Ruey Messenger of Julius Garfinckel and Co., has planned a varied style show.

The Woman's Army and Navy League's annual Rummage Sale on 17 and 18 Oct.

will be held at a convenient midtown location at 1017 K St., N.W., according to Mrs. William D. Chandler, president of the League. The store building, on the corner of 11th and K, will be open daily from 9 to 1 beginning Monday, 6 Oct., for the convenience of those who wish to donate to the Rummage Sale.

The location is just a block from the Soldiers', Sailors', Marines' and Airmen's Club, which for 54 years had been owned and operated by the League as a "home and haven" for enlisted men. The clubhouse was completely painted inside and out during the Summer, but despite the confusion of pots of paint and ladders, there was "business as usual." More than 7500 servicemen stayed at the SSM&A Club in June, July and August. Proceeds from the annual Rummage Sale this month will go to the operation and maintenance fund of the club.

The Chaplains Wives' Club of the Greater Washington Area will resume its monthly meetings on 7 Oct. 1952 at the Walter Reed Hospital Officers' Club.

In her illustrated talk, "Knowing Our Neighbors," Mrs. Miles will discuss some of the South American countries she has visited.

Serving as hostesses for the October meeting will be: Mrs. Stanton W. Salisbury, Mrs. Ivan L. Bennett, and Mrs. Charles I. Carpenter.

The Navy Doctors Wives' Club of Washington will meet for luncheon at the Officers' Club, National Naval Medical Center, on Thursday, 9 Oct., at 12:30 o'clock. The guest speaker will be Miss Vera Clay, Washington correspondent for Newsweek Magazine, who will report on her personal interviews with Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Ives, sister of Governor Stevenson.

Wives of all Naval Medical Officers, Regular, Retired, and Reserve, on active duty, and widows of such officers are eligible for membership. Those who have not been notified may make reservations for the luncheon by calling Mrs. Robert B. Brown, Oliver 2500, extension 467.

The Chorus, directed by Miss Dorothy Remington, is well known in Veterans' Hospitals in the Washington area for since its organization in 1947 they have presented over one hundred concerts for hospital patients. Practically all of the young men in the Chorus as well as a number of the young women were members of the Armed Forces and for this reason they have been especially delighted to present the numerous return concerts which are at the request of the patients.

Both programs are under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

The Ft. Lesley J. McNair Officers' Club will be the place of the next luncheon meeting of the Military Police Officers Wives' Club to be held on Wednesday, 8 Oct., at 12:15 P. M. Among the 180 officers and ladies present were Finance Corps personnel from the Second Army, Baltimore, Ft. Holabird, Aberdeen, Carlisle Barracks and Ft. Belvoir. Because of the program, an estimated $225,000 savings have been passed on to the nation's taxpayers.

port on success of the Cost Consciousness program at the camp. The idea originated with 1st Lt. Robert L. Williams, in charge of the program.

Army Audit Agency

d. Receipts and disbursements of cash.
e. Military pay.
f. Civilian pay and related retirement records.

g. Working capital funds (industrial and stock) and Management funds.
h. Nonappropriated funds.

i. Financial aspects of procurement.

While the Agency is authorized to audit all nine of these areas, five of them have to be deferred for personnel limitations, because of the lack of integrated accounting, and for other reasons. The Agency is auditing the following four areas at the present time: Property and inventory accounting; working capital and management funds, nonappropriated funds, and financial aspects of procurement.

Property auditing is a short term for the auditing of more than 20 types of military accounts, some on a unit or inventory accounting basis, others having financial accounting systems. There are normally seven technical service supply accounts at a station and each differs from the other in some detail of procurement, issue and reporting.

Under the present approach to the job, audits are made on an account basis; that is one installation may have a dozen accounts all of which would be audited and reported on separately and independently. Most of these audits are performed by resident auditors who remain at the installation but are not under the control of the installation commander. At the present time, approximately 400 auditors are engaged in this type of work throughout the United States.

This agency also has the responsibility to report to the Comptroller of the Army on the condition of the accounting for and the auditing of nonappropriated funds, but the actual performance of these audits has been delegated. Current regulations provide (Paragraph 6, AR 36-5) that continental Army Commanders have responsibility for the audit of nonappropriated funds within their respective commands. This audit responsibility is to be discharged by commanders of installations where the funds are located who will have the audit performed by personnel in their employ. The internal audit of nonappropriated funds by the Army Audit Agency will consist of an appraisal of the accounting and financial operations in nonappropriated fund activities on a continental Army command basis giving due consideration to the auditing performed by them.

The Army Audit Agency is at present engaged in the first audit of the financial aspects of procurement. Initial efforts were directed towards gaining the basic knowledge of the procurement agency's policies and procedures to serve as a starting point for development of a sound program. Concentration of effort has been directed towards the contracting division and the stock control area.

The Army Audit Agency cooperates completely with the General Accounting Office. Its regional offices are authorized and directed to grant access to permanent files, work papers and reports of audits to authorized personnel of the General Accounting Office, in accordance with existing security requirements and on a "need to know basis."

The greatest problem at the present time is obtaining competent personnel. The quality of auditing depends on the ability and caliber of the audit staff.

Production Awards Council

Establishment of a Department of Defense Production Awards Council is announced by Chairman John D. Small of the Munitions Board. The new agency, formed with the approval of Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, will review and establish production awards procedures and criteria, and will select the recipients of such awards.

The directive setting up the Awards Council provides for a four-man body consisting of a civilian representative of the Munitions Board and a general or flag-rank officer, or civilian of equivalent grade, to represent each of the three military departments. The Army, Navy and Air Force members of the Munitions Board have designated their respective members of the Council.

The Munitions Board representative acts as chairman of the council. For each council member there is an alternate.

Harold R. Austin, Vice Chairman for Production and Requirements, Munitions Board, has been named principal Munitions Board member and chairman of the council. William C. Wallace, Coordinator of Field Offices, is alternate.

The Army member is Maj. Gen. J. K. Christmas, Chief, Procurement Division. His alternate is Harry L. Erlicher, Special Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Research and Material).

Rear Adm. Richard M. Watt, Jr., Assistant Chief of Naval Material and Director of Production Policy Division, Office of Naval Material, is Navy member with Capt. Elbert L. Fryberger, also of the Office of Naval Material, alternate.

Air Force member is Maj. Gen. Clarence S. Irvine, Deputy Commander for Production, Air Materiel Command. Alternate is Col. Beverly H. Warren, Deputy Director for Production, Air Materiel Command.

Order New Weather Study

Scientists of the General Electric Research Laboratory soon will start a one-year study of long-distance weather migrations and cloud physics for the Office of Naval Research.

According to Dr. C. G. Suits, G-E vice president and director of research, a contract for the study has been signed by laboratory officials and representatives of the Naval research group.

Dr. Irving Langmuir, Nobel prize winner and consultant for the G-E Research Laboratory, will conduct research into weather movements over long distances and will extend and intensify studies he has made on the transcontinental travel of weather systems.

The new project has no connection with Project Cirrus, joint weather research program of the Army Signal Corps and the Office of Naval Research, in consultation with the G-E Research Laboratory, Dr. Suits said.

New Radio Receiver

A new general utility radio receiver is now being produced for the Army Signal Corps by the Emerson Radio and Phonograph Corporation of New York. The new unit is designed for use in all types of armored and personnel vehicles, gun carriages, and field and fixed installations.

Designated the AN/GRR-5, the receiver is designed to achieve maximum ruggedness and reliability under all operating conditions. It is immersion proof and concussion proof and is capable of operation from dry battery, storage or mobile-type battery or AC power line. Precision pre-set channels may be selected and easily altered at the will of the operator. Equipped with four bands, it receives a wide gamut of signal and communication transmissions and can be used as a transmitter monitor or intercept unit. Automatic switch over from AC line operation to storage or dry battery operation has been provided to prevent interruptions due to power failure. Another feature is the built-in crystal calibrator to insure accuracy of channel selection.

The receiver was developed by the Rauland Corporation and first put into mass production by Emerson.

Refrigeration Standardization

A program to standardize components of refrigeration and air conditioning equipment used by the Department of Defense has been undertaken by the Defense Supply Management Agency of the Department of Defense with the support of the refrigeration industry.

A Munitions Board Industry Advisory Committee, composed of representatives of 11 manufacturers of such equipment selected to reflect a cross-section of the industry by size of company, is collecting data necessary to complete the work. A sub-committee is considering the particular problem of compressors.

The committee will develop plans for reducing the number of types of refrigeration and air conditioning units used by the three military departments to attain the maximum practicable interchangeability of parts and components.

Ultimate objective of the standardization effort is to simplify spare parts supply and maintenance in order to increase efficiency and effectiveness of military supporting services to combat areas.

Members of the main committee are: Mr. Donald French, Carrier Corporation; Mr. B. S. Booher, General Motors Corp.; Mr. L. W. Larsen, Tecumseh Products Company; Mr. R. F. Lauer, York Corp.; Mr. J. L. Ditzler, Westinghouse Corp.; Mr. C. L. Coulter, Lehigh Manufacturing Co.; Mr. Clyde Ploeger, Servel, Inc.; Mr. S. D. Loveley, Chrysler Corp.; Mr. Oscar Buschman, Copeland Refrigeration Corp.; Mr. Frank Hawk, Brunner Manufacturing Co.; and Mr. K. A. Gould, General Machine and Manufacturing Co. Rear Adm. J. W. Fowler, USN (Ret.), Director of the Defense Supply Management Agency, is Chairman; Mr. Nathan Brodsky, Deputy Director of the Defense Supply Management Agency, is Deputy Chairman, and Kenneth A. The refrigeration equipment aboard the U.S.S. Forrestal, also being supplied by Carrier, will be a direct expansion system of the reciprocating type for the ship's stores and cold storage compartments comprising approximately 25,000 cubic feet.

Deliver B-47 Engines

After many months spent in tooling up plants in South Bend, Ind., Chicago, Ill., and New Brunswick, N. J., for the production of turbo-jet engines for the B-47 stratojet bomber, the Studebaker Corporation has delivered its first shipment of engines to the Air Force.

The official announcement was made by Harold S. Vance, Studebaker board chairman and president as he and P. O. Peterson, executive vice president, Lt. Col. John G. Keller, a representative of the Air Force, and other company officials watched workers seal the first engine in its metal container and load it onto a freight car as the first shipment was prepared.

Joint Purchase Agency Begins Operations In NYC

The Armed Services Textile and Apparel Procurement Agency (ASTAPA) newly established Army-Navy-Air Force and Marine Corps purchasing organization, began operations 1 Oct. at 111 East 16th Street, New York 3, New York. Brig. Gen. R. P. Hollis, USA, formerly in command of the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency, has been named Chief of the Agency Staff.

ASTAPA is expected to fill a long-felt need for the creation of a joint Armed Forces purchasing agency capable of achieving maximum efficiency and economy in the buying of clothing, footwear, textiles, and related supplies for use by the four military services both at home and overseas. The Armed Services Textile and Apparel Procurement Agency, said General Hollis, has been set up in order to expedite effective resolution of the many complex difficulties inherent in buying for defense.

Created after a long and exhaustive study of the overall problems involved, ASTAPA is to operate under the supervision of a directorate of the top Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps procurement officials, comprising The Quartermaster General of the Army; the Chief, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy; the Commanding General, Air Materiel command of the Air Force, and the Quartermaster General of the Marine Corps, or their designated representatives. This directorate will be subject to policy control of the Munitions Board. Effective utilization of the expanded and improved facilities of the new joint procurement agency was designed to enable the Department of Defense to meet all requirements covering clothing, footwear, and textiles at the lowest cost to the taxpayer.

ASTAPA will be responsible for all operational phases of military procurement planning, explained General Hollis, including consolidation of requirements, analysis of the market, and determination of patterns for the phased placement of orders in such a way as to insure meeting the complete needs of the Armed Services at all times.

ASTAPA will have a joint staff composed of officers of the Army, the Air Force, the Navy, and the Marine Corps. The Chief of the Agency Staff will have for his principal assistant a Deputy Chief of Agency Staff from one of the other services. Rotation of these key individuals will occur every two years.

General Hollis emphasized the fact that activation of ASTAPA does not imply the liquidation of the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency, which will continue operating at 111 East 16th Street, New York 3, New York. The procurement of paper and forest products, certain subsistence items, and miscellaneous supplies will be made by NYQMPA as heretofore.

Many NYQMPA functions will remain as they are. The New York Navy Purchasing Office, located at the same address, will be similarly affected. Only those activities relating to the direct responsibilities of ASTAPA have been transferred to the new agency.

It will be the policy of ASTAPA to keep industry and the general public fully informed as to designated government procurement activities—including the dissemination of authorized information concerning the new agency's policies, plans, procedures, operating methods, supply needs, awards, and related matters.

Key members of the Armed Services Textile and Apparel Procurement Agency staff, 111 East 16th Street, New York 3, N. Y., have been tentatively assigned, as follows:

Chief of Agency Staff—Brig. Gen. R. P. Hollis, USA.
Deputy Chief of Agency Staff—Col. Paul I. Doty, USAF.
Assistant to Chief of Agency Staff—Lt. Col. M. C. Martin, Jr., USMC.
Chief, Legal Office—Mr. George M. Clarke, Jr.
Chief, Planning and Budget Office—Comdr. E. D. Stanley, Jr., USN.
Chief, Public Information Office—Mr. Arthur D. Baird.
Chief, Purchasing Division—Col. J. F. Howard, USA.
Chief, Services Division—Capt. H. T. Dinsmore, USN.

Air Force—will have called up for training some 330,000 additional Reservists from among the large number of men who saw service in and after World War II and who, on their release, were not placed in any organized reserve. The success of this scheme has been astonishing. In the event of mobilization, the Reservists would be immediately available not only to bring both first line and Reserve divisions up to full war establishment but also to provide reinforcements.

The United Kingdom maintains a Navy and Air Force second only in strength among North Atlantic Treaty countries to those of the United States of America. At the same time, the United Kingdom maintains also an Army which, as Mr. Churchill stated recently, is designed to enable us to put 22 divisions or their equivalent into the field.

This army is divided into two categories, Regular or First-Line and Reserve. Almost the whole of the Regular Army is already fully employed overseas in the "cold war." Thus there are four divisions in Germany. For the rest, Regular British Divisions are deployed in the Middle East, Malaya, Hongkong and Korea.

In the United Kingdom, behind this Regular Army, there is the Reserve Army, which includes infantry and armored divisions. The state of readiness of the Reserve divisions depends primarily on the progress of rearmament and on the rate at which military equipment comes to hand.

Such then is the United Kingdom's military achievement, on the sea and in the air as well as by land.

have the capability as well as the will to bring support. This fact should have an impact on public opinion in those countries, to NATO's advantage; it could impress nearby neutral Sweden as well—and non-neutral eastern Europe.

6. It has trained some 80,000 men (and by lesson all others) in the habit of operating in wartime's arduous conditions. American sea and air forces have benefited especially from this new acquaintance with North Sea operating conditions.

7. Other nations, which may have doubted, must see that as of today we have a strong establishment, with a far greater potential, capable of operating very far from base, without undue worry over enemy air or submarine.

8. Major commanders have had an opportunity to operate with real forces, to note deficiencies and correct them, to observe readiness and improve it, to support with fact some long-considered recommendations on, say, tactics to the Joint Chiefs and on, say, equipment needs, to scientists.

9. Certain Allies, whose aid is indispensable and whose spirit is quite as good as our own, must see that they themselves need to make numerous internal improvements if they are to utilize fully such a force, especially in the field of communications. They have certainly witnessed in American carrier operation such grand scale performance as to explain our industrious development of deck efficiency and swift control.

10. We ourselves must have learned that our echelons of command did not function as swiftly as they should; we can learn from the Sixth Fleet. We must have learned that we ought to do more with weather forecasting. We surely have seen the necessity of building up our communications structure to match the other elements of power, for the critiques must have shown that we did not operate this vast task force at its maximum efficiency. We did not get the best of our communications, or of our all-weather planes, or of our radar countermeasures, although it is interesting to note that even in course of the maneuver we effected some improvement.

Well, an exercise which proved that we are too good to believe would be as useless as it is improbable. We will, in fact, by benefiting for months from the experience of two weeks.
